About the Seminar

Information, there's a wealth of it out there in the market but when it comes to legal matters, how can you be assured of the credibility of the source - Especially so for cross-border transactions where matters are beyond your area of expertise.

In a recent survey of cross-border practitioners, 78% of respondents agreed that internationalisation drives the growth of cross-border transactions and may continue to rise irrespective of economic cycles. In Singapore, this trend can be observed on 2 levels: The increase of mergers between local and international law firms and the establishment of international centres such as the SIAC and SICC.

Opportunities seem to be abundant in this area but increasing legal complexity in this space makes it both challenging and risky for Law firms to effectively translate these into effective growth for their firms.

With a newly launched cross-border resource centre on Practical Law containing over 400 regularly maintained databases across 21 jurisdictions, it enhances the depth of resources available for practitioners that are already utilising Practical Law for their cross-border matters. Coupled with maintained standard documents, practice notes, checklists and jurisdiction specific guidance on drafting and practice, it provides practitioners with a full overview of the necessary stages in a transaction.

Broaden your scope of practice with the resources available, enabling you to take advantage of the growing opportunities in cross-border matters. As an added benefit, all registrants for this session will receive a 14-day Free Trial on Practical Law to explore the Cross-Border Resource Centre.

Highlights of the seminar

- Trends on Cross-border transactions for the legal industry
- Vast bank of practice notes covering all the major practice areas, from quick notes and overview to detailed guidance for specialists
- Country-by-Country guides covering legal regimes, key topics and common pitfalls
- Demonstration of our cross-border dashboard to help you navigate complex matters and identify areas of risk
